This is a paper about empowering computer science students to analyze EEG data. In the paper, the authors recommend Convolutional Neural Networks (CNNs), Recurrent Neural Networks (RNNs), and Transformers for EEG analysis. They mention studies that use these algorithms for motor imagery, seizure detection, and emotion detection. The article also includes advice for CS students new to this field.